Phoenix Truck Rental: Answers to FAQ on Towing

In case you went into an agreement that allows you to tow, you need to make sure that you are adhering to the standard when it comes to towing. With our long years of experience in the field of moving, we have managed to answer a considerable portion of questions with regards to Phoenix Truck Rental.

How Can I Determine If a Truck Has the Capacity to Tow?

During your reservation process, the Phoenix Truck Rental company should provide you comprehensive information about the truck you are renting. They should have a system that can determine if the combination on your towing will work. You can also contact their company hotline should you need any assistance.

What Are the Specific Weight Allowed?

Examine the trailer, and you will notice an indication on the capacity of the trailer. However, this is clearly not the Recommended Weight. The recommended weight should vary depending on the capacity of the vehicle, and it is regularly lower compared to the maximum weight capacity. The Phoenix Truck Rental should have the capacity to provide you with recommended weight. The average cargo weight should also be specified in the agreement.

Is it Important to Load My Cargo Properly?

Demo Version - Select.Pdf SDK

Proper loading of your cargo is quite essential. The heavier item should be located in front (the part attached to the hauler) as recommended by the Phoenix Truck Rental company. At least 60% of the overall weight should be positioned close to the front. The lighter items, on the other hand, can be set to the top or the rear of the trailer. Make sure to secure it with a rope to prevent your items from shifting during transit.

These are just a small portion of the common questions that you need to know if you signed a contract with the Phoenix Truck Rental company that comes with towing agreement. Be sure to call our hotline or visit our online portal for additional information.
